HISTORIAN MACAULAY.

His Appearance Gave No Indication of His Mental Gifts.

Although not an athlete, Macaulay was active and high spirited. He used to amuse himself at Cambridge and probably in later years with such sports as horn blowing until his neighbors wished him far enough away. He was a good walker, and that, if it can be dignified by so pretentious a name, was his only bodily accomplishment. Ride he never could, and when, as cabinet minister in attendance on the queen, he was informed that a horse was at his disposal, he replied that if he were to ride it must be on an elephant. In person he was not prepossessing, says the Gentleman's Magazine. Mrs. Beecher Stowe, in "Sunny Memories of Foreign Lands," describes him as short, stout and commonplace—indeed, thoroughly English, to quote her uncomplimentary language. Fat and rather ungainly, with a countenance that in repose was singularly wanting in animation and intellect, he might have been mistaken for an unlettered farmer; indeed, he was actually taken for a "cholera doctor"—so, at least, Mr. Greville informs us, with exquisite good taste and very scant courtesy to the followers of Galen. That very accomplished gossip describes with Macaulay and his consternation when he discovered that the fat, silent man at his side who had been so busily absorbed getting through his dinner, was the famous Thomas Babington Macaulay. The model in Mme. Tussaud's gallery is faithful enough, and it is in no sense that of an imposing or particularly handsome man. He dressed expensively but with want of taste, and he looked more like a good-humored, country-bred tradesman of slender parts than a brilliant wit, distinguished statesman and irrepressible talker. Talking, when he was in humor, was his delight. He would talk for hours, no matter who was present, and he rarely gave his hearers those brilliant occasional flashes of silence, as Sydney Smith humorously and felicitously called them.

COULDN'T SEE THE JOKE.

A Story Which if True Illustrates English Ignorance of American Affairs.

According to a gentleman who recently returned from England some of the well-known men there are not well informed as to the details of American history. He told a New York Times reporter this story:

During the stay of Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Russell Harrison in London the London Times gave considerable space to details of the receptions given them, and on one occasion spoke of Mrs. McKee as "the daughter of Mr. Charles Harrison, president of the United States."

This caused a good deal of comment on the part of Americans in London. A few days after the publication occurred one of the dinners given in honor of the distinguished Americans in London, and then James S. Clarkson was one of the after-dinner talkers. He professed his ignorance of the details of English politics, and expressed regret at the fact, but said he thought there were some reciprocal conditions among Englishmen, as he had seen the name of Mrs. McKee's father printed as "Charles Harrison, president of the United States."

This he thought should be an offset for any errors he might make in speaking of Englishmen and affairs.

A burst of applause and laughter from the Americans present followed, and when it had died down a titled Englishman, who had not joined in the applause, spoke up: "And where is the joke?"

Then the Americans again applauded.

A CURIOUS RAILROAD.

July Twelve Miles Long, But a Regular Sky-Scraper.

In railroad circles there was considerable interest manifested in the recently reported sale of the famous "Rainbow" route of Otto Mears. The report serves to draw attention to what is undoubtedly one of the most unique lines of railroads in the world. The road is not more than twelve miles in length, extending from Silverton to Ironton, Col., but as a marvelous result of engineering skill deserves to rank as one of the wonders of the world. No one is quite so near heaven on a railroad as when traveling in one of Mear's "baby" passenger cars.

The trip from Silverton to Ironton leaves a vivid impression on the mind of the tourist. It skirts the edge of unfathomable abysses, winds over mountain peaks, traverses regions of eternal snow, leaps cataracts, spans gorges and finally bumps right into the solid wall of the granite mountain. How the obstruction is overcome is not at first apparent, but by the aid of a complicated set of turn-tables engines and cars are turned around and sail merrily down hill to their destination.

Noted German Genius.

Honest Hans Sachs was the poetical genius of medieval Germany. He was born (the son of a tailor) at Nuremberg, 1494, and died in 1578. Before his death he followed the trade of a shoemaker, the proceeds of which served his needs; for the productions of his genius he obtained nothing. He left behind him six thousand different compositions, which Schlegel says are superior in invention and the true poetic spirit even to the works of Chaucer. His irreproachable life and cheerful and amiable character have caused him to be remembered through all ages as Honest Hans Sachs.

Old-Time Lunches.

In old times mine host sat at the head of the single large table which was the central object in a New York restaurant of the better class, and when the hour came for the midday meal and the merchants trooped in from their nearby shops the proprietor of the chop-house would with due ceremony carve the joint and serve his "family." Whereupon the waiters would assist the customers to the side tables and the meal would proceed at a comfortable, leisurely gait. The "hurry" lunches of to-day were unknown in Face Bleach.

MRS. GRAHAM'S

Cucumber and Elder Flower Cream

It is not a cosmetic in the sense in which that term is popularly used, but permanently beautifies. It creates a soft, smooth, clear velvety skin, and by daily use gradually makes the complexion several shades whiter. It is a constant protection from the effects of sun and wind, and prevents sunburn and freckles, and blackheads, will never come while you use it. It cleanses the face far better than does soap and water, nourishes and builds up the skin tissues and those prevent the formation of wrinkles. It gives the freshness, clearness and smoothness of the skin that you had when a little girl. Every lady, young or old ought to use it, as it gives a most youthful appearance to any lady, and that permanently. It contains no acid, powder or alkali, and is as harmless as dew and as nourishing to the skin as dew is to the flower. Price $1.00, at all druggists and hair-dressers, or at Mrs. Gervase Graham's establishment, 101 Post Street, San Francisco, where she treats ladies for all blemishes of the face or figure. Ladies at a distance treated by letter. Send stamp for little book "How to be Beautiful."

SAMPLE BOTTLE mailed free to any lady on receipt of 10 cents in stamps to pay for postage and packing. Lady Agents wanted.

MRS. GRAHAM'S FACE BLEACH.

NOSE AND EAR PIERCING.

Old Ornaments Worn by the Savage Races.

The ornaments put through the walls of the nose vary greatly. There may be but one perforation in each wall or there may be several. In New Zealand and flowers, in New Guinea a crab's claw, in New Britain thorns, set upright, are the objects thus worn. These are all original and primitive; after the natives come in contact with whites, these give place to metal buttons and rings. In the Sturges collection is a rather pretty nose-ornament from New Guinea. It is V-shaped, and the arms fit by stud-shanks, one into each wall of the nose.

Nose ornaments were known to the Jews of the exile—Ezekiel, xvi, 12: "And I will put a jewel on thy nose;" and Isaiah lii, 21: "The rings and nose jewels." The cheeks are pierced by some Eskimos, who wear little round stud buttons in the holes. Ears are pierced the world over. A few cases must suffice. Schweinfurth says that Babuiker women pierce the rim of the ears repeatedly and wear therein bits of straw an inch in length, having twenty such, perhaps, in each year. This repeated piercing of the ear is common among barbarous people, and we have seen a woman of the Sae and Fox Indians who wore seven brass rings in one ear. Ears may be slit and stretched instead of pierced. They then hang in long loops. Catlin gives a picture of an Indian whose beauty had been increased in this way. The Anchovite islander slits his ears while the Fijian often has them slit and stretched to such an extent that the two flaps might be placed in the openings. Slit ears may be of practical use. The Kafir carries his snuff-box in his ear-hole, and Captain Cook figures a Mangala islander who carried a large knife in his right ear.—Prof. Frederick Starr, in Popular Science Monthly.

A Clown Goad.

Richmond, Me., is the home of a clown, a man of a peculiar nature of amusement all along the Kennebec. He is a pet among the straggling men and a regular visitor at the wharf when steamers arrive or depart. One day last week Billy's owner missed him, but two days afterward, when the steamer Kennebec arrived, the goat walked calmly down the gangplank, dressed in a pair of old trousers, a swallowtail coat and a stovepipe hat. He had been in Boston with his friends, the deck hands, and came home with an increased dignity of bearing naturally consequent upon a visit to that learned town. When a lady in the waiting-room patted him the goat whipped her veil from her face and swallowed it in a twinkling. Then he went home in his new togs, which he has probably since eaten.
